

Homecoming

An Anthropology
of Return Migrations

Ewa Nowicka
Homa Firouzbakhch (eds.)

NOMIOS

Homecoming

An Anthropology
of Return Migrations

Homecoming

An Anthropology
of Return Migrations

Ewa Nowicka
Homa Firouzbakhch (eds.)

NOMIOS

Editing of the book is supported by Minister of Science and Higher Education

Cover Photo by Wojciech Nowicki (Polish-Belarusian border, July 2005)

ISBN 978-83-60490-59-4

© Copyright by Zakład Wydawniczy »NOMOS« 2008

All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system, or transmitted, in any form, or by any means, without the prior permission of Zakład Wydawniczy »NOMOS«

Printed in Poland 2008 by Zakład Wydawniczy »NOMOS«
31-208 Kraków, ul. Kluczborska 25/3u
Phone (+48 12) 6261921
e-mail: biuro@nomos.pl
www.nomos.pl

TABLE OF CONTENTS

PREFACE .....	7
Ewa Nowicka , Introduction. The Study of Return Migrations .....	9
Grzegorz Babiński , Return Migration Revisited .....	21
Krystyna Romaniszyn , Migration Networks and Return Migration. ....	31
Anastasia Christou , Narrating Diasporic Imaginations: Life Stories of Second Generation Greek-American and Greek-Danish “Return Migrants” .....	45
Ewa Nowicka , Identity of Greek Repatriates from Poland. Return Home or New Migration? .....	59
Homa Firouzbakhch , At Home and Not at Home: A Personal Account ....	79
Jarosław Malecki , Ethnic Conflict in the Process of Repatriation .....	91
Slawomir Łodziński and Paweł Hut , “Widely open closed doors”. The Repatriation and Repatriation Policy in Poland After 1989 .....	99
Robert Wyszynski , Citizenship or Nationality – a Difficult Return from Kazakhstan. ....	117
Wojciech Poleć , The French or the Pole – Polish Returnees from France .....	139
Michał W. Kowalski , “Aussiedler” Group from Silesia. A Return to Homeland? .....	155
Barbara Bossak-Herbst , The Changing Image of Gdańsk – from Regained Homeland to Multicultural City. ....	165
Krystyna Slany, Magdalena Ślusarczyk , Socio-Demographic Analysis of Return Migrations in Poland in 1990–2004 .....	183
Małgorzata Melchior , Returns to the Mythical Homeland. The Jewish Case .....	211

Bogumila Lisocka-Jaegermann , Trans-national Communities and Trans-national Spaces in Mexican-U.S. Migration. The Meaning of “Returns” and “Presence” in an Interconnected World. The Absent Ones Always Present? . . . . .	221
Petra Andits , Possible Homecomings. Australian-Hungarians’ Attempts of Reintegration in Hungary . . . . .	235
Ewa Nowicka , Back to Africa Ideologies. Real and Symbolic Return . . . .	251
Bibliography . . . . .	263

PREFACE

We live in a world that migration and remigration, in the life of individuals, families and groups increase the opportunity of contacts between different cultures, and at the same time create new migratory patterns. This territorial mobility, in turn, redefines the very concept of identity, being local, regional, cultural, national or transnational. And yet, if migration received some scholarly attentions, the phenomena of return migrations and international return migrations have been rather neglected. Most notably, research on return migrations mainly concentrated on its economic and political aspects and consequences. Surprisingly, the social and cultural differences of receiving and sending societies as well as the socio-psychological profiles of the return migrants received little or no scholarly interests. Some authors suggested and predicted (Appadurai) the diminishing importance of territorial factor in the identity formation of the contemporary people. Contrary to those views, we can observe ubiquitous sources of manifestation of relations between groups and their territories of origin. These relations range from emotional, social to practical ties and connections. We witness a complex but infinitely vivid importance of the place of birth, the place of origin and the place of the early age as backgrounds of the individual and the collective identity of groups all over the world. The deterritorialization of the individual or the group identity is certainly not a simple and all encompassing process in our times. Why do migrants – voluntarily and permanently – return to their native lands? Is the return influenced by changes in their country of origin? Is it due to changes inside the receiving country, as the result of for instance a growing hostility towards foreigners, nationalistic tendencies and/or intolerance and xenophobia? Or is it due to the „ideology of return” cultivated by migrants in the host country?

These questions and reflections were discussed during a conference held in Warsaw, at the Warsaw University (March 31st-April 1st, 2006) ; the majority of articles included in this volume, were presented during the conference. Some of the papers included here, were presented in Bristol (September 18–25), during the 2006 Biannual conference of the European Association of Social Anthropologists. We also incorporated Petra Andits's article which is a particularly pertinent one to the subject of this book. Andits using Australian-Hungarian travel diaries examines a particular aspect of the return migration. More specifically, she focuses on strategies that returnees employ to reintegrate into their native land, in order to avoid marginalization. Papers included in the present volume, analyze various cases of literal and physical return migrations. Some of them, develop the subject of cultural elaboration of attitudes towards the home-country, with an emphasis on imaginary rather than real returns. We have also decided to include in our volume a personal and intimate account of a return home of an exiled, written by one of the co-editors, Homa Firouzbakhch. We are aware that the text is written in an entirely different style than other articles. In her paper, problems raised by all other authors are presented subjectively. The author narrates her personal experiences of exile and her subsequent return after twenty years to find out she is a stranger in her own home country. The article has also a methodological peculiarity being doubly subjective. The author uses her diary written during her journey back to home, re-elaborating on her own earlier autobiographical materials from the point of view of her present situation.

The title of our book requires a comment: it is inspired by the famous essay of Alfred Schuetz «The HomeComer» published almost half a century ago, a classical study of return migration providing an illuminating sociological and anthropological insights into the phenomenon of return to home-country. We still find the Schuetzian essay inspiring in the study of contemporary social and territorial mobility.

As the editors of this book, we would like to express our acknowledgments to all contributors of the volume. It was a great pleasure to cooperate with you all. We would also like to extend our gratitude to all doctoral students, assistants and the staff of the Social Anthropology section of the department of Sociology at the Warsaw University, who were active and helpful discussants. We wish to express a special gratitude to Wojciech Połec for his invaluable help in organizing the conference on return migration held at the University of Warsaw.

Ewa Nowicka and Homa Firouzbakhch

Warsaw, Gdańsk, November 2007