

Table of contents

Acknowledgements .....	11
Introduction .....	13

Part 1. What does the research on crime and unemployment tell us?

1. Methodological dilemmas and pointless debates .....	29
1.1. Introduction .....	29
1.2. Inconclusive results .....	30
1.3. Dilemma 1: choice of unit of analysis .....	32
1.4. Dilemma 2: classification of crimes .....	33
1.5. Dilemma 3: measurement of unemployment and income situation .....	36
1.6. Dilemma 4: statistical modeling .....	39
1.7. Summing up .....	41
2. In search of causal mechanisms .....	44
2.1. Rational cost-benefit calculations .....	45
2.2. Relative deprivation .....	50
2.3. “Opportunity structures” and changes in American cities .....	55
2.4. A stake in conformity .....	60
2.5. The social disorganization hypothesis .....	63
2.6. “Broken windows” and vicious circles of urban decline .....	71
2.7. “Opportunity creates a thief” .....	74
2.8. Summing up .....	79
3. Research questions and hypotheses .....	81

Part 2. Poverty, unemployment and crime in Polish voievodships. Statistical analyses

4. Where is the crime rate higher? .....	97
--	----

---

4.1. Variables in the analysis	97
4.2. Results	117
4.3. Summing up	129
5. Where did the crime rate rise?	131
5.1. Introduction	131
5.2. Variables in the analysis	133
5.3. Results	144
5.4. Random effects models: an additional test of result validity	166
5.5. Summary and conclusions	171

Part 3. Poverty, unemployment and crime in local communities

6. Economic situation and crime: initial analyses	179
6.1. Introduction: data and methods	179
6.2. The economic situation in the studied towns	189
6.3. Unemployment	202
6.4. Poverty	207
6.5. Crime	211
6.6. Time series analyses	216
6.7. Summary and further questions	221
7. Crime: different phenomena under the same label?	225
7.1. Introduction	225
7.2. Theft	226
7.3. Violent crime	237
7.4. Conclusions	240
8. A closer look at unemployment and crime in the studied towns	243
8.1. Introduction	243
8.2. Long-term unemployment	244
8.3. Who is unemployed?	250
8.4. Is education always worthwhile?	256
8.5. How does poverty emerge in the studied communities?	261
8.6. Depth of poverty	263
8.7. Do welfare payments spell meaningful relief?	271
8.8. Alternative sources of income in the studied towns	274
8.9. Some comments and conclusions	277

---

9. Labor market: quality of job opportunities . . . . .	279
9.1. Introduction . . . . .	279
9.2. „Quality” of jobs, Part I: analysis of the occupational structure .	281
9.3. „Quality” of jobs, Part II: how much do different people earn? .	285
9.4. Work, but for how long? . . . . .	296
9.5. Conclusions . . . . .	299
10. Together or apart? Social bonds in the studied towns . . . . .	302
10.1. Sense of anonymity and neighborliness . . . . .	304
10.2. Local social activity . . . . .	311
10.3. Summing up . . . . .	327
11. Communities’ reaction to crime . . . . .	329
11.1. Introduction . . . . .	329
11.2. Fear of crime among residents . . . . .	332
11.3. Social control behavior . . . . .	338
11.4. Social and economic determinants of control . . . . .	344
12. Case studies: summary and conclusions . . . . .	351
Concluding comments . . . . .	359
Bibliography . . . . .	363
Appendix: Interview guide for the town case studies . . . . .	373
Summary . . . . .	381