

A Tram Across the Street and Other Works

The book is a critical edition of poems and prose by Jerzy Jankowski, a Polish poet from the early 20th century. The edition is preceded by a biography, containing the reconstruction of the poet's life. The author's works are annotated to bring them closer to modern readers. An editorial note follows, which presents the specificity of the material and tries to explain to the readers the technical difficulties encountered, including those of attribution. The publication also features a register of variants.
